

Bio's Participants

The Science and Politics of Glyphosate Workshop

Tuesday 17 September
Gent University
Campus Aula, Universiteitstraat 4-6, 9000 Gent, Belgium

Tanya Wyatt, PhD is a professor of criminology at Northumbria University in Newcastle, UK. Her research focuses on wildlife trafficking and non-human animal welfare as well as the links to corruption and organised crime. She is author of the book Wildlife Trafficking: a deconstruction of the crime, the victims, and the offenders and the forthcoming textbook Crime and Power (with Professor Pam Davies).

Delon Alain Omrow, PhD, is an Instructor in the Faculty of Liberal Arts and Professional Studies at York University in Toronto, Canada. He earned his undergraduate and graduate degrees in criminology from York University and the University of Toronto, respectively. Before arriving at York University, Delon worked with Conservation International Guyana, overseeing the establishment of the country's first community-owned conservation area. He is the author of A History of Discursive Violence: constructing the Amerindian 'other', published in 2018. He has taught in the Department of Equity Studies for seven years, exploring what he refers to as racialized ecologies; the androcentric-anthropocentric symbiosis of trauma; and the way the lived experiences of the disempowered and marginalized are articulated through contemporary environmental discourse. In addition, he has written for numerous publications including The European Journal of Research and Reflection in Arts and Humanities and The International Journal of Academic Research and Reflection. In 2018, he received The Distinguished Alumni and Community Services Award from the Durham Catholic District School Board.

Christoph H. Stefes, Ph.D., is a Professor for Comparative Politics at the University of Colorado Denver and a Senior Associate at the Ecologic Institute Berlin. In his teaching and research, he focuses on political regimes, environmental politics, and energy transitions. At the Ecologic Institute, Christoph was the scientific coordinator of a large research project on environmental crime (EFFACE), funded by the European Union. The findings of this project were published in several articles, policy papers, and a volume that he co-edited with Ragnhild Sollund and Anna Rita Germani (Fighting Environmental Crime in Europe and Beyond, 2016).

Giulia Giardi, drs., is a PhD researcher at the Department of Criminal Law and Criminology of the Faculty of Law at Maastricht University, the Netherlands. In her research she analyses the problem of waste trafficking by applying (criminological) theoretical frameworks in a multi-level case study of criminal cases in the Netherlands. She also evaluates existing legislation and control mechanisms used to enforce environmental regulations in this field. Giulia holds an LL.B. in European Law with a minor in Criminal Justice and Human Rights, an LL.M in Globalisation and Law with a specialisation in Human Rights and a Masters in Political Science focusing on organized crime and corruption. Giulia also worked at the Maastricht Centre for European Law, at the Italian National Desk at Eurojust in The Hague and for an Italian NGO (Gruppo Abele) on large national online campaign against corruption (Riparte il Futuro- Restarting the Future).

Wim Huisman, PhD (1970) is a professor of criminology and the head of the VU School of Criminology, the Netherlands. He is founder and board member of the European Working Group on Organizational Crime (EUROC) of the European Society of Criminology. Currently, Wim is chair of the Netherlands Society of Criminology and Co-editor in chief of Crime, Law & Social Change. Wim's research focus of is on the field of white-collar crime, corporate crime, and organised crime. Recently funded research projects focus on criminal careers of white-collar offenders, corporate complicity to gross human rights violations, causes of corruption, corporate environmental crime and the prevention of food fraud. Wim has been a visiting professor at Griffith University, Brisbane, Northeastern University, Boston, USA, and Mekelle University, Ethiopia.

Yogi Hale Hendlin, PhD is an assistant professor in theoretical philosophy at Erasmus School of Philosophy, and a core faculty member of the Erasmus Initiative on Dynamics of Inclusive Prosperity Initiative. Yogi's research focuses on major questions in philosophy of biology, environmental philosophy, and political philosophy, inflected by public health issues. Current research includes the social determinants of health, environmental justice and decolonization movements, equitable and effective carbon taxes, e-waste, and the biosemiotics of interspecies communication. Yogi earned a PhD in Philosophy (magna cum laude) at the University of Kiel, Germany in 2015; holds degrees from the University of California, Berkeley, UCLA, and the London School of Economics; and held postdoctoral research fellowships at the University of Vienna and the University of California, San Francisco.