

TeachEUR – Student-designed classes – student instruction example

A state-of-the-art theme is always key to the content sessions within the field of [... specialist field ...] or to methods used to conduct research into [... topic ...]. Students read the prescribed literature as preparation for these sessions and are also expected to make an active contribution during the sessions. Each session, a group of students is designated use a literature study to deliver part of the session. These preparatory groups can be assigned during the first session and can be found on Canvas after this.

The designated group is responsible for ensuring a good discussion of the literature. This enables students to add their own creative or innovative touch during the session. This could include a discussion, presentation, handling cases, quizzes, role play, or splitting into smaller groups and using the literature to formulate criticism. The session must, however, ensure better understanding of the literature.